

Comey's salvation the stuff of miracle

The foundation texts of all major religions of our world state or infer that all sinners can be redeemed.

That said, the redemption of the former Federal Bureau of Investigation chief James Comey has to be the fastest in human history. It goes far beyond the 'fast tracking' the Vatican recently took for Mother Theresa and the late Pope John Paul II (Karol Wojtyla of Poland).

Literally, just weeks after being pilloried, metaphorically flagellated and character-assassinated by the American leftist media, the entire U.S. Democratic Party as well as 50 per cent of the American population, Mr. Comey is about to ascend to symbolic 'sainthood' by way of these same elements who called for his repudiation, demonization, dismissal; the authors of unrelenting attacks on his personal integrity (which had always been viewed as his principal strength).

Apparently, his intransigent position to address Congress solely in public sessions on his dealings with President Trump has washed away all sins and transgressions, with absolution conferred upon him.

It is the absolute height of hypocrisy. Is it any wonder the media and political parties have lost all credibility among ordinary citizens?

Michael B. Sullivan,
Shediac

Eyes also windows to your health

Whether eyes are the windows to your soul may be up for debate, but they're most certainly windows to your health. What may seem like a minor issue with your eye can, at times, be signals of greater issues impacting your overall health.

Take for example, my patient Michael Babcock. When he was just one year old he struggled with walking and had an inward turning eye. Michael was developing normally in all other areas but his pediatrician sent him to me for further work up.

Michael was brought in for a routine eye check-up with me, an ophthalmologist (a medical doctor specializing in eye care), and I discovered that he had swollen optic nerves. I ordered an MRI, which led to the discovery of a brain tumour.

This brain tumour caused his brain pressure to increase, which I was able to see by looking inside his eyes. Luckily, Michael was quickly taken to a neurosurgeon who successfully removed the tumour. Now Michael is playing in the jungle gym like any other kid.

About 5.5 million Canadians live with a major eye disease that could cause vision loss. This is why in May, Vision Health Month, Canadians should learn more about their eye health.

An eye check-up is a proactive way to stay healthy. Your optometrist or family physician can spot issues and refer you to an ophthalmologist. As the only medical and surgical specialists in eye health, ophthalmologists have the unique ability to diagnose and treat eye disease and conditions - and restore vision.

Healthy eyes are key to a healthy life, so when you're deciding what to do this weekend, I implore you to ask, 'When was the last time I got my eyes checked?' and to make sure you see the most appropriate eye-care professional for your needs.

Dr. Ken Roberts,
Fredericton